

Red Mesa Oilfield Services

Established, safety-focused oilfield services platform supporting regional upstream and midstream customers

Purpose of this handout. This fictional example shows the concise buyer-facing overview that would be tailored from your records. It introduces the company and invites a controlled next step; it does not disclose detailed financial, customer, employee, or commercial information.

Company at a Glance

Ownership	Multi-generational, family-owned operating company
Established	More than 30 years of continuous regional operating history
Service area	Primary operations across two U.S. oil and gas basins
Core services	Wellsite support, fluid logistics, specialized equipment rental, and related field services
Operating platform	Two service yards, a maintained fleet, dispatch capability, and a documented safety program
Team & customers	Experienced field and office team serving a diversified operator and midstream customer base
Financial profile	Summary metrics presented in appropriate ranges after mutual confidentiality is in place

Why the Business Merits Consideration

Durable operating reputation. Illustratively, the completed packet would cite verified evidence such as years in business, safety performance, repeat business, or response-time reliability.

Differentiated field capability. The completed packet would identify specialized equipment, certifications, permits, local experience, or capacity that has buyer relevance.

Stable customer relationships. The completed packet would describe customer diversity, repeat work, or backlog without naming customers or disclosing customer-level economics.

Transition-ready team. The completed packet would explain management depth and the family's intended transition support, using only facts the owners approve.

Ownership Transition Discussion

Illustrative positioning: "The family is open to a thoughtful discussion with a well-qualified buyer whose values, resources, and long-term plans align with the company's people, customers, and operating legacy. Detailed diligence would follow only through a mutually agreed confidential process."

The final version would use your actual company name, selected evidence, approved operating description, and the contact person your family designates.